"Building products that connect people and businesses to opportunity is something I think about every day," said Roslansky. "It's why I'm so excited and honored to be working with the Intuit team and to be part of its culture of innovation committed to helping its customers thrive and grow."

Yuan founded Zoom Video Communications in 2011 and now serves as CEO. He was an early employee at WebEx, a web conferencing company that was acquired by Cisco in 2007. Yuan brings his experience leading and scaling a public company from zero to greater than $4 billion in revenue in fewer than 12 years. He also brings expertise in security, customer experience, and product innovation to Intuit. Yuan was named the 2020 Time Businessperson of the Year for enabling a new way of working, and he was included in the Time 100 Most Influential People of 2020.

Yuan said, "I have always admired Intuit's innovative culture and its focus on customer experience. I founded Zoom to build a platform that is simple, yet powerful, and I feel that Intuit has the same philosophy. It is my pleasure to join the board of directors and work alongside Sasan and the team."

With the addition of Roslansky and Yuan, Intuit's board now has 11 directors.
