Intuit Extends GoPayment No Monthly Fee and Free Credit Card Reader Offer

Thousands More Microbusinesses Using GoPayment to Get Paid on the Go

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Responding to overwhelming demand, Intuit Inc. (Nasdaq: INTU) will continue to offer GoPayment, a mobile payment app for processing credit cards, with a free credit card reader and no monthly fee.

Intuit first offered GoPayment with a free credit card reader and no monthly fee in early January. Due to a high level of demand, Intuit will continue the offer indefinitely so that the smallest of small businesses, such as dog walkers, nannies and jewelry makers, can affordably start processing credit cards on their mobile phones. Since the initial offer, Intuit has more than tripled the number of customers signing up for GoPayment each day.

"With our original announcement of GoPayment's free credit card reader and no monthly fee, we hoped to make it more affordable for any person in business no matter how small," said Chris Hylen, vice president and general manager of Intuit's Payment Solutions division.

"The strong demand we've seen confirmed our beliefs. We are therefore continuing the offer as we now know for certain that it's meeting the mobile payment needs of both the person who makes an occasional sale to the hundreds of thousands of small businesses that have relied on us for years to get paid."

GoPayment was introduced two years ago as one of the first mobile payment services on the market. It was designed to help people easily and quickly get paid via their mobile devices wherever they do business. GoPayment is available for iOS, Android and Blackberry.
